By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Conspiracy and official misconduct charges were filed Friday against 4th Ward Alderman Dan Partney and police Sgts. James Reader and Dave Rosenberg by a special prosecutor appointed Thursday.

Informations were issued by Special Prosecutor Clyde L. Kuehn, Belleville, a former St. Clair County state's attorney. Kuehn was appointed to the case by Chief Circuit Judge P.J. O'Neill, 3rd Judicial Circuit, at the Madison County Courthouse, Edwardsville.

The charges allege Partney, while a fire and police commissioner in 1985, helped Reader and Rosenberg obtain the nation's two highest scores on a standardized test used to determine eligibility for promotion to sergeant. Both were promoted based, in part, on those scores.

Assistant Madison County State's Attorney Myles McCahill said the special prosecutor was necessary because it is anticipated Madison County State's Attorney Dick Allen and "one or two assistants" will be called as witnesses by the defense.

Grand jury indictments against the three issued in January were dropped, separately, by the state's attorney because the charges were technically flawed.

Leon Scroggins, Partney's attorney, said he had been given copies of the informations but had not had time to examine them closely.

"I was asked if I had anything to say and I replied that my only comment was that the fact they waited until the last possible day to file them said something about this case," Scroggins said.

"I think we're talking about a statute of limitations in the case of three years and I think some of the dates here are July 9. If true, today (July 8) was the last day."

The original indictments allege the incident took place between July 5 and 18, 1985.

Partney said the timing of the informations was politically motivated.

"I wish you guys would quit getting me in trouble," he said. "On June 30, you print a list show-

Warfield agrees to cooperate with engineering department

By Mike Myers

GRANITE CITY — Superintendent of Streets Mac Warfield said he wants to make it very clear — he will not be responsible for any of Mayor Von Dee Cruse's appointed officials.

"I'll work with them. I'm willing to know what my responsibilities are. Hell, I've been there long enough to know. And I think I've been doing a pretty fair job," Warfield said.

Cruse presented the City Council with a memo Tuesday instructing the Engineering Department to get Warfield's approval for all projects involving his department.

"The mayor may rest assured that as the elected superintendent of streets I will continue to fulfill the obligations of my office to the people of Granite City as I have in the past. I am glad he has finally recognized what the responsibilities of the office of the superintendent of streets are. If, by his letter of July 8, he is asking for my cooperation in serving our city, he may rest assured that he has it."

"However, I will not be responsible for the actions of the city engineer and those other office holders that the mayor appoints and has authority over. He must be responsible for his actions as I will be for mine," Warfield said in a written reply to Cruse sent to the Press-Record/Journal.

"That's a nice statement," Cruse said. "He's right; I finally saw that's the way it should be. I don't have any problems with that."

Both Cruse and Warfield said they were sure that each knows his job and its responsibilities. Both said that, though they don't always agree, they have never had a fight.

"I'll work with anyone in the city for the betterment of the city," Warfield said. "There is a lot of work to be done. Look around the city; you can see that. I'm not going to get in a fight."

"A lot of people think we're bitter enemies," Cruse said. "A lot of people would like to see Mac and me get into a 'knock-down, drag-out' and I'm not going to do it. I'm not going to satisfy them."

"I was elected to do my job," Warfield said. "Just like the mayor was elected to do his. Mine is the streets; his is the mayor's office and all that goes with that. My job isn't to take over the engineers, nor to be responsible for the engineers. I will work with them."

"I think Mac's done a terrific job," Cruse said. "He's done a lot of good work. I'm going to brag about it if I run for mayor. And Mac's the one who put it all together."

East St. Louis man, 58, crushed to death in accident on Madison rails

MADISON — Billy Conners, 58, East St. Louis, was killed Wednesday when he was crushed between a crane and a railroad car in Madison.

Conners, of the 1000 block of Liberty St., was an employee of O'Dell's Iron and Steel Co., Inc., where he had worked for four months. The accident happened at about 3:25 p.m. on Madison's Railroad Association property about one-eighth mile north of the company facility at 116 State St.

Company spokesman William O'Dell said Conners was a "burner," whose job was to cut scrap iron with a cutting torch.

He said Conners was part of a regular three-man crew consisting of two burners and a crane operator.

O'Dell said that although nobody saw exactly what happened, Conners apparently was walking between the crane and one of two railroad cars being unloaded by the crane. The pivoting crane's counterweight hit him against the gondola-type car, crushing the left side of his chest. O'Dell said there is about one foot of clearance between the crane and the car and Conners was a large man.

O'Dell said Conners was about 100 feet away from his normal work station when the accident happened. He was seen lying on the ground by the other burner in the crew.

O'Dell described Conners as a safe worker who had previously worked at other scrap yards before O'Dell hired him in March.

Conners was pronounced dead at 3:50 p.m. Madison County Chief Deputy Coroner Ralph Baahmann Jr. called the death an "apparent accident."

A spokesman for the Terminal Railroad police declined to comment pending completion of an investigation by the railroad.

Selection of principals, consolidation discussed

By Paul Guggins
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Candidates for two principals' positions in District 9 have been interviewed by the Board of Education, and selections will probably be announced later this month.

The board is also considering whether to consolidate administrative duties by eliminating a position.

There are vacancies for principals at Prather and Mitchell elementary schools.

Former Prather Principal Michael Loftus resigned to take a job as principal of a middle school in Troy, and Alfred Wilson, formerly the Mitchell principal, stepped down to take a teaching position in District 9.

A field of 20 candidates has been narrowed to eight, including three from within the district, Superintendent Gib Walmesley said. The board held interviews Wednesday and Thursday, and is expected to make its selections at either the July 12 or 19 board meeting.

The board must also decide whether to eliminate a position as part of an administrative consolidation, Walmesley said.

The consolidation could include the elimination of either a principal's or assistant principal's position.

"In my opinion, they should look at all alternatives," Walmesley said.

Board President Monroe Worthen said the board will consider a consolidation if it could save money without hurting the quality of education.

"If we can do it without seriously hampering the function of buildings and the supervision, then we're going to take a hard look at it," he said.

Low turnout predicted for Tuesday's primary

By Rick Arnold

Election officials are predicting an extremely low voter turnout for Tuesday's special primary election in the 21st Congressional District.

The district includes all of Madison County, most of St. Clair County and portions of Monroe, Bond and Clinton counties.

"If we have 15 percent of the eligible voters, we'll be lucky," Madison County Clerk Evelyn Bowles said.

On the Democratic ticket, St. Clair County Board Chairman Jerry Costello will oppose Clarence Ellis, East St. Louis Aldermanic Council acting chairman. Robert Gaffner of Greenville, a community college administrator, is running unopposed on the Republican ticket.

Gaffner will face either Costello or Ellis in the Aug. 9 special general election for a five-month unexpired term.

Costello and Gaffner, both winners in the March primary election, will then face each other in the Nov. 8 election.

The special elections are necessary because of the April 22 death of veteran U.S. Rep. Mel Price, D-Belleville. According to Illinois law, a special election must be held if a congressional seat is vacated more than 180 days before a November general election.

Charles Mister of East St. Louis originally filed as a Republican candidate for the July 12 primary but later withdrew, leaving Gaffner unopposed for the nomination.

Bowles said not only will the hot weather and vacation schedule keep voters away but also the fact that many people are unhappy that these summertime elections are being held at all.

"There is some degree of resentment among voters. They feel like the law should have made other provisions," Bowles said. "They feel it's a waste of time and money."

St. Clair County Clerk Janice Delaney said she is expecting a low turnout in her county.

"There hasn't been any interest in absentee voting," Delaney said.

Absentee voting has also been low in East St. Louis, said James Lewis, a supervisor with the city's Board of Elections. Not many people are likely to vote, Lewis said, noting that just because Ellis is an East St. Louis resident does not mean he will make much of a difference in the turnout.

Delaney and Bowles also said they do not expect much of an increase in voter interest for the Aug. 9 election.

David Wagner, Costello's campaign manager, said he also expects a low turnout at the polls but said that won't affect the election's outcome and impact.

Jerry enjoys broad-based support so I don't think the turnout will make much difference," Wagner said.

Special primary election Tuesday

East St. Louis Alderman Clarence Ellis faces St. Clair County Board Chairman Jerry Costello in the Democratic primary Tuesday for the 21st Congressional District seat; Robert Gaffner, Republican, is unopposed.

Letters

Costello best candidate

To the editor:

Following the death of our dear friend, Mel Price, it is up to us to choose a worthy successor to serve in his place. There is no doubt in my mind that Jerry Costello is that person.

As a result of retirements, deaths, and congressmen running for the U.S. Senate, there will be at least 25 congressional seats totally open this year. Combined with shifts that may occur due to election results, the "House freshman class of 1989" will be a class of roughly 35.

These freshman members will all take the oath of office next January — except for our new congressman, who will begin serving immediately after the Aug. 9 special election. In Congress, and particularly the House of Representatives, functions on the basis of seniority. This is the reason why it is so important that we elect Jerry Costello to succeed Mel Price.

If we make sure that Jerry wins the special July 12 primary, the special general election Aug. 9 and the regular general election Nov. 8, we will have assured the citizens of the 21st District of a congressman with added seniority who will serve in the best tradition of Mel Price.

Jerry Costello's public record speaks for itself. His honesty, integrity, dedication and hard work in behalf of all of us are good reasons why Jerry deserves our support. Leadership and compassion are his strong points, as they were for Mel Price.

I hope you will join me in supporting and voting for Jerry Costello. Let's make Jerry the senior congressman in this year's freshman class.

ALAN J. DIXON
U.S. senator

Gaffner best candidate

To the editor:

I would like to urge support for Bob Gaffner in the special elections for Congress, July 12 and Aug. 9.

This election was made necessary by the death of veteran Cong. Mel Price, who represented this district for many years. The district includes Madison and Bond counties, most of St. Clair and parts of Clinton and Montgomery counties.

Price rose to head the Armed Services Committee, but lost influence in his last few years due to mounting age and infirmity.

He was strongly pro-labor on social issues, favored a strong defense, and was one of the "last of the small spenders," relying on personal name recognition, constituent services, and party support rather than money from campaign contributors.

Bob Gaffner, a moderate Republican, ran three times against Price, doing increasingly well as he gained voter recognition and as voters realized Price's seniority was a declining asset.

Gaffner strongly supports the Reagan economic policies that have led to declining inflation and increased employment.

Costello, the main Democratic contender, won a hard-fought four-way primary in March and has one minor opponent in the July 12 special primary. Costello has a reputation for "tough politics" in St. Clair County, and would probably be an Illinois "hard-nosed Democrat," closely allied with Chicago Democrats, if elected.

Both candidates will be running again in the main November election.

Gaffner is by far the better candidate, in my opinion; but he'll need a lot of independent and disgruntled Democrat votes to win Tuesday, Aug. 9.

Simon, 40 years writing

To the editor:

My ever-alert staff tells me that this marks the 40th anniversary of launching my weekly column.

When I was 19 some incredibly courageous people loaned me the money to purchase a small, weekly newspaper in Troy, Ill., and late in June 1948 I wrote my first column.

I write these columns myself, typing them on an old manual typewriter. I felt somewhat old-fashioned sticking to my old Royal typewriter until I learned that columnist George Will writes his column with a fountain pen.

Most of the things I have stood for through the years bear up pretty well.

I stressed the need for pay-as-you-go government or we would be headed for serious financial problems, never dreaming at that time that we would ever have the kind of deficits we have today.

In 1981, I warned that the tax bill would cause massive deficits, and quoted a former Nixon cabinet member, James Schlesinger, as saying that it would "likely go down in history as the single most irresponsible fiscal action of modern times."

How right and courageous Jim Schlesinger was. That was said at a time when the president assured us that the 1981 tax bill would result in a balanced budget by 1984. The pro-positional had great popularity.

During these years I've called for more jobs instead of welfare and for Western Europe to share more of the burden for defense of that area, called for long-term care for seniors; and here and there tried to work in a lesson from history, one of my interests.

I'm grateful to people who have suggested ideas for my column, or more often have written me about something and I feel that it is worth commenting on.

I'm grateful to Pamela Huey and David Carle and others who through the years have had the job of figuring out my illegible handwriting as I correct and tried to improve the typewriter product.

Whether I have informed anyone else through the process, I have informed myself.

It helps me as a legislator. It is easy to get up on the Senate floor and talk on some subject, but putting it in writing requires a little more thought.

The discipline of writing, of shifting from a casual observation of truth to making sure something is a fact, of learning just a little more about some subject so I can be sure I am on solid ground — all this has helped me become a better informed public servant.

So I shall continue the habit.

U.S. SEN. PAUL SIMON

Pain in neck can extend to lengthy list of no-no's

In the interests of science, and getting a good night's sleep, today we will review a medical journal.

The publication in question is Care of the Neck — a brilliantly written, grippingly illustrated pamphlet published 22 years ago by the J.B. Lippincott Co. of Philadelphia and Toronto.

I just purchased this book, semi-willingly, for $3. It was the cheapest thing on the menu at my neck doctor's office.

For a couple of weeks, I had what used to be called a "crick," but which by its persistence had become at least a small river. I couldn't turn my head more than a quarter of an inch in either direction.

My doctor took lots of pictures, asked around a little and declared the problem was all in my head, except for the small irritation that extended to my shoulders.

Then he pronounced my neck strained and sold me a copy of the pamphlet.

If you have a sore neck, do not read this book. It will have the same effect as reading a study on airplane engine failure while flying over an ocean.

If you insist, you will learn things about your neck and the rest of your body that you would be far happier not knowing.

Did you know, for example, that "reading in bed or sleeping with a high pillow is a frequent cause of headache, pain in neck, shoulders and arms?" The book shows a picture of a woman with a 1966 hairdo reading in bed. If she's still doing that, it's reasonable to think about what kind of shape she must be in today.

The next illustration shows the same woman incorrectly sleeping on her abdomen. Imagine someone foolishly enough to sleep on her stomach! That position "increases sway back and twists the neck. Avoid this at all times."

Other no-no's include working at a desk, playing cards, talking on the telephone, ironing, knitting, sewing and ironing. These are neck-killers.

Martin on the Metro

By Pat Martin

I was beginning to panic when I got to the part that showed the woman on the sofa watching television.

"viewing television while lying in bed or on the divan must be avoided," it said firmly.

This was a medical book, written by two doctors. They had to know what they were talking about. The issue was no longer about television. They were ordering a major lifestyle change!

Then I caught them. Right on Page 9, when they were talking about where to put your arms when sleeping, they blew it.

"No one knows for sure where his arms are while asleep," they wrote.

That may be true for Venus de Milo, but I know where mine are; they are attached to my sore shoulders, which are hooked onto my stiff neck.

If a book tells you it's not possible to know where your arms are during sleep, why should you listen to warnings about watching television or knitting?

So if you get a stiff neck, go see your doctor but don't buy his book. Watch the movie instead. From the couch.

New taxes collected

Madison County officially began collecting its new 3 percent "bed tax" July 1. The tax was approved in April and was originally to take effect May 1. This was changed to June 1 and then to July 1. The county approved the tax to help the Alton and Collinsville tourism bureaus promote Madison County. The tax is on room rentals; Collinsville and Alton, which already had existing hotel/motel taxes, are exempt. It is estimated the new bed tax will raise $125,000 a year. That amount would be matched by state grants.

In a recent finance committee meeting, county Administrator Jim Monday said the tax was delayed because some hotels and motels weren't given official notice to begin collection. Committee member Alan Dunstan of Troy said the treasurer's office had been working on getting out property tax bills and hadn't had time to notify motel owners of the bed tax.

Committee member William Little said that although the tax was collected starting July 1, the County Board will have to approve that date later this year, at its July 20 meeting.

The county's new quarter-cent sales tax also began on July 1. The sales tax will be collected on most sales except food and drugs.

The total sales tax in areas of Madison County within the county transit district will climb to 6.5 cents on the dollar. In areas outside the transit district, the sales tax will increase to 6.25 cents per dollar, in line with new county and state laws.

Meanwhile, an ordinance establishing a hotel/motel bed tax for the city of Troy was expected to be discussed by the Troy City Council.

If Troy approves its own 3 percent bed tax, it would take the place of the county's bed tax, with Troy, rather than the two tourism bureaus, receiving the revenues.

It was Troy Alderman Velda Arnes' idea to keep the bed tax for the city. "This is the only way we can get our portion of the tax," she said.

Troy has three hotels; the amount of bed tax revenue to be generated has not been determined.

"We could do our own individual programs to bring people into the town," Arnes said. Bob Ermonick of the Collinsville tourism bureau said the bureau has done its best to serve the entire area.

Lodge plans cookout

GRANITE CITY — A public barbecue at Granite City Moose Lodge 1272, 1919 Adams Street, is planned Saturday, July 16, starting at noon. Bob Thebeau, lodge public relations chairman, announced.

The event is being sponsored by Moose Legion 1, a division of Lodge 272.

A pork steak plate which includes baked beans and cole slaw will cost $3.50 and a pork steak sandwich will cost $2.50.

Carryouts will be available and the public is invited to attend, Thebeau said.

Calendar

The July meeting of the Madison County Legal Secretaries Association will be held Tuesday, July 12, at Amelia's, 16 Terminal Drive, Bethalto. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m.

The guest speaker will be attorney Dave Blunt, and the topic of the evening will be "FELA Cases." For more information, call Melody Travers or Lynne Hullinger at 466-9080.

Promenade honors area eighth grade graduates

VENICE — Nicole Holloway, a St. Mark Parochial School eighth grade student, and Marvin Treadway, an eighth grade graduate from Venice Grade School, were chosen queen and king at the 1988 promenade honoring eighth grade graduates from Venice and Madison public and parochial schools.

The gala event was sponsored by the Venice Park District's Recreation Department and held in the Venice Recreation Center. Charles Collins, park recreation director, coordinated the activity.

The royal court consisted of Pamela Hart and Norman Hopkins, who were selected as runners-up to the queen and king, and Marcus Treadway, Raynard Sherrod, Karen Butler, Tyshia Foster, Denise Brownie, Zandra Brown, Rhode Jefferies, and Yoshi Fryor.

More than 30 young people attending enjoyed the evening, according to Anna Claggett, past president of the Park District, who assisted in arranging the promenade.

Also assisting was Seth Kirkpatrick, Venice Grade School principal.

Named to Red Cross committee

Pat Swecker, section supervisor for St. Elizabeth Medical Center's blood bank, has been appointed to the American Red Cross Technical Advisory Committee. She is the first representative from SEMC on that committee.

"The committee is primarily a liaison between the hospitals and the American Red Cross," Swecker said. "We will take the complaints and problems the hospitals have and try to work them out with American Red Cross personnel."

She will be joined on the committee by 15 other blood bank supervisors from area hospitals and several technical advisers from the American Red Cross, which serves 144 hospitals in this area.

The committee also allows for communication between hospitals. They supply technical leadership and peer review for blood banks and their personnel.

SEMC gives tips for staying cool

Karen Marzluft, a registered nurse in the emergency room of St. Elizabeth Medical Center, has offered these tips for staying safe and cool:

1. If you have air conditioning in your home, keep it on. If you do not have air conditioning, make sure that your house is well-ventilated. Keep the windows open and fans on. Ceiling fans and box fans work well to move the air around.
2. Make sure you drink lots of fluids, but avoid alcohol.
3. Reduce your activity during the hottest part of the day. Take a hint from people who live in hotter climates; take a siesta. Or, go to an afternoon movie, the mall, the bowling alley or your local senior citizen center. Try to stay indoors, and be quiet and cool.
4. If you do go out, wear a loose-fitting hat. This will protect your head from the sun's rays. This is especially important for senior citizens and infants.
5. Wear loose fitting, light colored clothing. The light colors reflect heat rather than absorb it, keeping you cooler.
6. Limit your outside work or exercise to the early morning or the evening when it is cooler, if you can. Do not mow your lawn in the middle of the day.
7. Eat light: Reducing your caloric intake will make you feel cooler.
8. If you feel hot, take a cool bath or sponge off with a cool, wet cloth.
9. If you have infants in your house, be careful of taking them in swimming pools to cool them off. The water reflects the sun's rays and, even though water is usually cooling, infants can become overheated if they are in the pool too long," she said.

- Some signs and symptoms of heat exhaustion are:
1. Any change in behavior, such as erratic thought or confusion.
  2. A staggering gait or weakness.
  3. Elevated temperature.
  4. Skin hot to the touch even though the person may be in a cool room.

"If you see someone who is exhibiting these behaviors, you need to bring them inside to cool off. Give them plenty of fluids to hydrate them. Loosen their clothing and apply cool, wet cloths," said Dr. Dan Barr, also of the SEMC Emergency Room.

"If this does not seem to work, take them to their doctor's office or to the nearest hospital emergency room."

"If you find someone who is unconscious, has an elevated temperature and has a dry mouth and tongue, it is probably a case of heat stroke. You need to bring that person to the emergency room immediately," Marzluft said.

In Madison County, anyone with heat-related problems may call the Emergency Services and Disaster Agency during the day at 692-0537. At night, they may call the sheriff's office at 692-6087.

Graduates from Nursing School

Granite City Jody Graville has graduated from Barnes Hospital School of Nursing.

She attended Barnes for three years, and will soon be taking Missouri State Board of Nursing exams.

Graville has accepted a registered nurse position at St. Louis Children's Hospital in the orthopedic nursing division. She will continue her education at St. Louis University to attain a bachelor's degree in nursing.

She is the daughter of Barb Hulin, Bethalto, and Jeffrey Graville, Las Vegas, and the granddaughter of Gerie and Lee Lorentz, Bunker Hill, and Hilda and Vasil Graville, Madison.

Former Granite City resident veterinarian in Marion County

Dr. Andrew Greer Pierson, formerly of Granite City, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Don F. Pierson of the Robins, Ill., Presbyterian Church, has received his DVM (doctor of veterinary medicine) degree from the University of Illinois.

The new graduate was named the outstanding veterinary student from the southern portion of Illinois by the Southern Illinois Veterinarians' Association. He also received the Veterinarian Medical Association award for 1988.

During veterinary school, Pierson was a member of the Illinois Student Chapter of the Veterinary Medical Association; the group sponsors both educational and social activities for students at the School of Veterinary Medicine.

Pierson was named an Illinois General Assembly Scholar for the three years he was a resident of Granite City. Sen. Sam Vadalabene, D-Edwardsville, was the sponsor of the award.

The new veterinarian has joined Dr. A.J. Sprague in Marion County. The mixed animal practice has clinics in both Salem and Centuria.

Pierson plans to marry Miss Nancy Pollitt of Naperville, Ill., in August. They will make their home in Centuria. Miss Pollitt has just received a master's degree in education from the U.S. of Illinois.

The new veterinarian is the son of the former pastor of the Nameoki Presbyterian Church, where he served for 13 years.

A. Today's banks are large enough to offer you the financial services you need, with one important extra... we're small enough to take a very personal interest in you and in your needs. When you open an account with a bank you get quite a lot more than just an account number. You get an expert, a financial specialist. The officers and employees of our bank, for example, are specially trained to help you choose the right service to meet your individual needs. The word, individual, is very important, because that is how our bank sees you... as individually important. This includes everything from personalized checks to state deposit boxes to trust services. Ask any of our officers about the many services offered which make our bank one that serves all of its customers. They'll be happy to tell you how we can help you make, save and stretch your money.

Charges

Dan Partney facing charges, again

ing me as a possible mayor candidate and now there's a special prosecutor. Here we go again.

"I think it has a lot to do with the police climate in Granite City. They want to keep my name in a cloud as long as they can."

"I'm looking forward to my day in court. The indictments were thrown out because of a technicality, because the state's attorney office is incompetent and didn't know how to write them. That left people wondering — being thrown out on a technicality still insinuates guilt."

"That doesn't clear my name. I'm looking forward to having a court of law clear my name. I'm not hesitant about proving my point."

"Then when I get done I intended to see the whole group in civil court for the hardships it's placed on my family and the anguish it's caused two good police officers and their families. Even if it stayed in court, I was going to have my day in court."

Reader and Rosenberg were placed on desk duty by former Police Chief Bob Astorian when indicted, but were returned to regular duty when the indictments were dropped.

Police Chief Jim Longyi said he planned to return them to the desk as a result of the information.

No departmental charges have been filed against either as a result of the allegations.

"It was just an accusation," Fire and Police Commissioner Joe Williams said. "Anyone can be indicted, can't they?"

Williams, who served on the board with Partney, said nothing had been proven or shown to indicate the accused men did anything wrong.

"It's getting closer to the mayor election," he said. "It doesn't surprise me that Dick Allen is trying to do it again."

Fire and Police Commissioner Linda Irwin said she thought that all the police chief ever had to go on were the test scores and that everyone was waiting for the criminal charges to be resolved.

"That's always been in my head: why do something and have it changed by the court's action? I didn't know why it would drag on so long," Irwin said.

She said she had never asked why departmental charges were not filed. Although the commissioners were obviously interested, she said, they could not get officially involved in the case unless charges were filed.

"I guess I was waiting to see if they were found guilty," she said. "I always assumed that, if there was no reissuance of the (criminal) charges, departmental charges would be filed."

Astorian said he never filed charges because an indictment was "just a legal accusation and a hearing before the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners" might get into the crux of what might come out of the trial.

He said he had met with a group of attorneys and the decision not to pursue charges had been made because, once filed, the case would take place within 30 days and the department would have to do it without information that might be revealed at the trial.

"It was a legal thing," he said. "We didn't want to goof anything up."

Army nurse opportunities

The Army Nurse Corps now has openings for professional nurses over 40 years of age in any specialty.

Previously, only operating room nurses, anesthetists, and nurses holding advanced degrees who were over 40, could apply to join the Army Nurse Corps, either as a reserve or active Army officer.

Due to a shortage of military nurses, the age ceiling now has been lifted. Other criteria, which remain in effect, include:

Nurses must be currently licensed; their education must be from an accredited program; they must have been employed full-time for six of the past 12 months; and they must pass the Army's physical examination requirements.

Capt. Howard Schloss, area Army Nurse Corps counselor, views the lifting of the age ceiling as not only a vital step to remedy the Army's shortage of nurses, but also as an opportunity for each applicant.

"Many nurses in this over-40 group now have fewer constraints on their time. Children they may have had are grown and have left home, allowing these nurses more free time."

"These nurses could easily supplement their income and add to their nursing education by joining a reserve unit, often the same civilian hospital where they work. Then for two weeks every year, usually in the summer, they would travel to a major military treatment facility."

For the individual Army nurse, the Army offers an attractive benefits package, which may include up to $20,000 to pay off professional loans, and tuition assistance (75 percent) to complete BSN (bachelor of science in nursing) degree requirements.

Nurses who already have their BSN can use G.I. Bill entitlements to pursue an advanced degree.

Active Army (or full-time military) service is another alternative for nursing professionals.

Schloss explains that "military pay is comparable initially, but is especially competitive after a year or two. In civilian life, nurses have a fairly generous starting salary, but the income ceiling over several years is rather low."

"We can show an applicant an Army pay chart and they can see exactly what they can expect to earn each year, and with each promotion. This, combined with Army benefits (which include free medical and dental care, housing or additional funds for off-post housing, travel, etc.) make an attractive package that is definitely worth considering."

Anyone interested in finding out more about the Army Nurse Corps can call this area's nurse recruiters at (314) 821-4386.
